This is a highly detailed historical map, likely a cadastral or revenue map from the 18th century, drawn on aged paper. The map depicts a large area divided into numerous rectangular plots, some of which are further subdivided. Several prominent features include:

- Handwritten Labels: Large, bold Hindi script labels are scattered across the map. At the top left, "सुरदे" (Surdai) is written. Below it, "जामा" (Jama) appears. To the right, "पिपडि" (Pipadi) is visible. Other smaller labels like "महल" (Mahal) and "बंगला" (Bangla) are also present.
- Geometric Features: A network of straight lines defines the plot boundaries. Diagonal lines cross the map, possibly representing roads or drainage channels. Some areas are enclosed by double lines, suggesting walls or specific types of enclosures.
- Structural Symbols: Simple geometric shapes, such as rectangles and squares, represent buildings or structures. One building is labeled "महल" (Mahal), indicating a palace or a significant residence.
- Measurements and Numbers: Numerous small numbers are written along the boundaries of the plots, likely indicating dimensions or land measurements in traditional units.
- Topography and Orientation: The map shows a grid-like layout, typical of planned settlements or military cantonments. There are no explicit symbols for mountains or rivers, but the overall shape suggests a defined geographical area.

The drawing is executed in dark ink, and the paper shows signs of age, including discoloration and some wear at the edges.
